Dear Bill:

It is with some chagrin that I arrive at the need to write you for the return of the documents I loaned you to photocopy on your last visit to Sedona.

Those documents, some of which are irreplacable, were not meant to leave town. I thought it was implicit and quid pro quo after you required the overnight return of your mimeographed and newspaper material after letting me photocopy it that you would treat my material in likewise fashion.

When you were here, I told you that, as investigators, our most valuable asset was our credibility. Yours has been diminished by your failure to timely return my research material. Cut your losses and put it in the mail today, registered.

Sincerely,

ED DeMAR
